Kenny Metcalf & The Who Generation

A Tribute To Elton John & The Who

About

Kenny Metcalf & The Who Generation combines two tribute productions in one act: Kenny Metcalf as Elton and The Who Generation.

Kenny Metcalf was the original touring keyboardist for Stryper on the 1985-86 tours and is the current frontman for Kenny Metcalf as Elton. His Elton portrayal is built around the voice and appearance of a young Elton John, with period-style presentation that includes rhinestones, sequins, iconic costumes, the Los Angeles Dodgers uniform designed by Bob Mackie, and glasses by Ray Winston created for Elton himself.

For buyers looking at the Elton set, the show centers on visual accuracy as well as live performance. Caleb Quaye said that witnessing the performance was like reliving shows such as Elton's 1975 Dodger Stadium performance, adding that being on stage with Kenny Metcalf was surreal.

The Who Generation is a tribute to The Who, built to recreate the band visually and sonically. The group was featured on AXS-TV's The World's Greatest Tribute Bands, and two members have also performed with, and for, Roger Daltrey.
