Get ya some 'a this! Adam Grant --Lead Vocals, Acoustic Guitar

Country singer/songwriter Adam Grant was born & raised in the small town of Shiloh in Harris County, Georgia. At a very young age he realized that music was his passion. Growing up in the country, Adam was either in the woods hunting or playing music. He started playing guitar at the age of 12 and almost immediately starting writing his own songs. After a few years under his belt, he started playing in local bands and realized that writing songs was his true love. By the age of 17 he had written country songs that are still being recorded and played on country radio today. In 1998 he had made his first trip to Nashville and met Vern Gosdin at the Nashville Palace near the Opryland Hotel. Adam Recalls Vern walking off stage after singing "This Ain't My First Rodeo" and coming up to him, sticking his hand out for a hand shake and saying "How ya doing son" This experience lit a fire in him that day and is still burning. By 2007 Adam had recorded his very first album in Nashville. Since then having three #1 songs on New Music Weekly, Voted BEST NEW GROUP 2010 as the lead singer of the Country group BADHORSE, #2 song on Christian radio, a music video with Terry Bradshaw and in two movies with Travis Tritt and John Schneider.

Adam has now written, recorded & produced his first solo album in Nashville which was released April of 2020 titled "ADAM GRANT" Not stopping there, Adam has already written more songs since the new album and plans to release more singles very soon. Adam really studied Garth Brooks during his early years of music and performed many of his songs during shows while developing his own style and sound of country music. With over 45 professionally recorded songs in his career, Adam has played shows and shared the stage with well known artists like Randy Travis, Randy Houser, John Michael Montgomery, Shenandoah, Neal McCoy, Zac Brown, Brian White and many more...
