

Still the One

About

Still the One is a high-energy Shania Twain tribute band based in the Dallas–Fort Worth area of Texas, known for capturing the essence of Shania’s country-pop charm through tight harmonies, dynamic stage presence, and faithful renditions of her biggest hits. The band delivers Shania’s signature mix of twang and crossover pop with authenticity and flair, consistently praised for their charisma and close resemblance to Twain’s original sound and performance style.

Still the One regularly performs at major North Texas events, including the North Texas Tribute Jam, local festivals, and venues like Dallas’s City Hall Stage and McKinney’s The District. They’ve also played iconic spots such as Big Al’s “Down the Hatch” in Waxahachie, drawing packed crowds across both intimate venues and large public stages. Their live shows span Shania’s full range of hits—from anthems like “Man! I Feel Like a Woman!” to heartfelt ballads like “You’re Still the One”—designed to get audiences singing along and dancing from start to finish.

The band’s success lies in their ability to channel Shania’s vocal nuances and stage charisma without impersonation, bringing a fresh yet nostalgic feel to every performance. Whether playing for barroom regulars or festival crowds, Still the One keeps the energy high and the crowd engaged, making them one of North Texas’s top tributes for fans of ‘90s country-pop and live music lovers alike.
