

Taken by the Sky

Tribute to Fleetwood Mac

About

Taken by the Sky is a Fleetwood Mac tribute band based in Portland, Oregon, focused on the band's golden era. The show centers on Fleetwood Mac's iconic harmonies, familiar songs, and the interplay that defined the group at its peak.

Jessa Campbell fronts the band with a vocal likeness and stage presence that pay tribute to a young Stevie Nicks. Lawrence Orleck, her longtime collaborator, takes on the role of Lindsey Buckingham, bringing the drive and detail associated with Fleetwood Mac's guitar work and onstage chemistry.

Colin Hogan covers the smooth vocals and layered keyboard parts of Christine McVie, while Brian Link handles the John McVie role on bass with a steady rhythmic foundation. Cheo Larcombe steps into the Mick Fleetwood part, supplying the pulse and energy at the center of the band's sound. Aram Arslanian represents Bob Welch, adding the early Fleetwood Mac feel and guitar lines tied to that period of the catalog.

The set is built to deliver the recognizable Fleetwood Mac sound through close harmonies, skillful musicianship, and a dynamic live presentation. Songs such as Go Your Own Way and Rhiannon are part of the experience, alongside the vocal blend and instrumental detail fans expect from this material.

Taken by the Sky has sold out venues across the region, broken city records for summer concerts, and headlined Harefest, described as the mother of all tribute band festivals. For buyers looking for a clearly defined Fleetwood Mac tribute with a full-band presentation and a strong connection to the source material, the act is easy to place on concert, festival, and tribute-focused bills.
