

The Wholigans

About

The Wholigans capture not only the sound and essence of The Who, but could easily pass for the original members. The band concentrates on the 'Live at Leeds' era, but their set list contains a majority of the most popular material from The Who's catalogue from day one until the final days of Keith Moon. From the stage clothes to the authentic stage gear, capturing the mannerisms of The Who, The Wholigans bring back memories of a Who of yesteryear. With the thrashing windmill of Pete Townshend, the mic swinging of Roger Daltrey, and the incredible drumming style of Keith Moon, combined with the thunderfingers of John Entwistle, The Wholigans have headlined 4 International WHO Conventions since 2003, appearing with Roger Daltrey and Simon Townshend of The Who, and have opened for Blue Oyster Cult, Foghat, and Burton Cummings of The Guess Who. The band has appeared on NBC and the BBC.
